University of Hertfordshire UH

Case pupil context record (PRP1)

Overarching outcome for the sequence of learning:

[Describe the overarching outcome for your sequence i.e what you want pupils to know, remember and be able to do by the end of the sequence].

-

Context of the school and class

[When planning the sequence of learning it is important to think about the context of the school and the class. Summarise the unique context of the school (refer to the school community and curriculum activity to inform this snapshot) and the context of the class. Refer to the percentage of pupils receiving pupil premium; percentage of pupils with SEND; the percentage of pupils with EAL; the attainment and setting, where applicable, of the class; and any addition bullet points about behaviour and engagement etc…]

-

	Case Pupil A	Case Pupil B	Case Pupil C
Rationale for case pupil selection:
Comments on prior attainment and/or learning in the subject: [Your bullet points may draw attention to: pupils' results in statutory tests; information gathered by internal summative and formative data; and information that you have gathered through your marking and in class observations]
Comments on pupil strengths and/or barriers to learning to inform my planning: [Your bullet points may draw attention to any identified learning needs; observations in class, discussions with other professionals and by talking to the pupil directly; and deconstructing approaches used by expert colleagues to ensure that all pupils have the opportunity to meet expectations].

University of Hertfordshire UH

Observations/what I am noticing about pupils' participation, learning, enjoyment, and progress over the sequence of lessons: [Your bullet points may draw attention to observations in class, discussions with other professionals who have observed the learning, by talking to the pupil directly in class, assessment, and feedback. You may comment on your choice of groupings; scaffolding; use of questioning etc…You may not have a comment to make after each lesson in the sequence and that's fine].
To be completed at the end of the sequence: overall reflections on how well each case pupil met the intended outcome of the sequence: [Your bullet points may draw attention to the actual outcome (if it's tangible) and pupils' workbooks to show the impact of your teaching. You may highlight effective use of support staff; use of well-designed resources; Remember, it may be that pupils have not met the intended outcome and you'll want to reflect on why – was it too ambitious or not ambitious enough? The importance at this stage is the quality of your reflections and learning from this for next time].			